These results are in every way satisfactory, especially in view of the fact that in most provinces the legislators have very properly discouraged any undue haste in the enactment of the movement.

2. Almost from the beginning of the movement under the Act of 1906, instances in which that Act required amendment have been abundant, and finally, on the recommendation of the Fourth Conference of Legislatures, it was decided to undertake the amendment of the Act. In the course of amending it, it was found simpler to reconstruct it altogether, and a new Bill was introduced into the Viceroy's Legislative Council in March 1911. The chief features in which the Bill differs from the existing Act are the abandonment of societies as co-operative with unlimited and limited liability (instead of as co-ops) and the abandonment of the extension of the Act to co-operatives other than credit societies; the premium awarded to some societies, with unlimited liability, but with share capital, to devolve profits; and the provision for societies of which other societies should be members. Some other minor alterations of policy have also been incorporated, but certain suggestions which have been at first put forward, such as those for allowing minor loans to become societies, for the abolition of the residential qualification in societies of unlimited liability, and for giving special powers to societies to recover loans, have not found a place in the Bill. The Bill has been published for criticism and will subsequently be referred to a Select Committee.

3. A Conference of Legislatures—the Fifth Annual Conference—was held in January 1911. It was the first held away from the headquarters of the Government of India, and took place at Allahabad in connection with the Industrial Exhibition. It was attended by the Legislatures of all provinces, except Punjab, and by a number of visitors. Reports of general progress from the provinces showed that there was an extraordinary diversity in the line of development followed in different parts of India, and not a small advantage of these conferences lay in the opportunity they afford for the experts of one province to be at first hand and to acquire further about special developments evolved in other parts. With difficulties of money, transport and custom, as great and as many as are to be found within British India and the Native States of India, any attempt at uniformity must fail. Uniformity is not to be found even in the European countries, where the movement originated, and has taken diverse hold, and even of the kind is contemplated in India. But just as the whole movement was started in imitation of European models, so experience in one province of India will afford examples to be followed or avoided in other parts of India.

4. Most provinces are now finding themselves able to attract sufficient funds without the aid of Government, and even in Eastern Bengal and Assam the amount of the subsidy given by the State is comparatively small. In several provinces, notably Madras, and also in Mysore, a Legislature has been made with cooperation other than that of credit, and the Bill lately introduced becomes law as it applies will be given to these.

5. With the increase in the number of societies the question of the constitution of central societies and unions has become one of great importance. In almost all the larger provinces an attempt has been made to express some form of union or central bank, and a valuable report has been made by one of the sub-committees of the recent conference (in paragraph 54 of the proceedings) which gives a brief description of the various methods which have hitherto been adopted in the different provinces. By financing and controlling societies such unions and banks will not only strengthen the position of the movement, but will also supply a form of management preferable to that of minute official inspection. A certain degree of Government inspection and control is inevitable, and at the same time the central societies such created will always be desirable, but emphasis must again be laid on the importance of making anything like a general centralising of the co-operative movement in this country. In most provinces voluntary organisations and lay help are becoming more readily available, and with access of expert knowledge the outside assistance is becoming of the greatest value.

6. A notable departure has been made in the Bombay Presidency, where, at the instance of the Government of Bombay, action has been given to the formation by the Hon'ble Sir V. Thackeray and Mr. L. Sankharia of a central bank in the Bombay Presidency of which the object is to finance co-operative societies of all kinds. Capital is to be raised by shares and debentures, interest on the latter being guaranteed by the Local Government. The Bank is to be subject to the approval of the Legislature, and a limit is set to the amount of short-term deposits which may be received and held by the Bank. It is hoped that arrangements may be made for the early commencement of operations by the Bank, and as progress will be watched by the Government of India with great interest.

7. There is much in the proceedings of the Conference of Legislatures which is of interest, and the recommendations made are commended to the attention of Local Governments, but there is no matter on which the centers of the Government of India are required.

A. G. CARRHOW,
Secretary to Government.

The column of the thermometer is twenty-two feet above the level of the sea, and the receiver of the Rain Gauge is two feet from the ground. The wind, rain and general weather registered are for the current Civil Day—from midnight to midnight.

The total quantity of rain collected since January 1st is 3.0 inches, the average due for the same period being 3.0 inches.
